Vineyard

100% Tannat from our best Tannat terroirs in Juanicó, Garzón and Mahoma, all coastal regions where the Atlantic Ocean gives more impact to the wine. Mahoma has vertical schists, Garzón has granite and Juanicó has clay and limestone.

Viticulture

The polyphenolic compounds in the skins and seeds are responsible for the color and structure of the wine. Due to their rapid maturation, we are able to harvest early, when the grapes have fresh aromas and a high content of balanced sugar and acidity. As a result, the wines from the Atlantic coast are balanced, with fresh aromas of ripe fruit and minerals, with an enveloping texture.

Winemaking

The significant color concentration in the skin of coastal Tannats requires only a short maceration: intense for the first 2 days and very gentle the following 5 days. The skins are mainly responsible for providing the tannins and anthocyanins. This technique allows for a very early harvest, when the fresh fruit aromas are at their highest. As Tannat has such a high anthocyanin concentration, the color of the wine is still very intense with this technique.

Tasting Notes

Intense sensation of ripe red fruit and some blackberry, plum & blueberry, with persistent aromas of roses and violets and a hint of fresh herbs and undergrowth. This wine is ample on the palate and lingers by virtue of its elegant freshness.
